Venice travel guide youtube

Venice is like no city on earth. Rising from the sea and running across a series of canals, it's easy to understand why many call it the Water City. In fact, the city is actually sinking into the Venetian lagoon right now (albeit in a fairly 2mm a year walk). In addition to being easy to see, there is no shortage of activities in Venice: with a wealth of culture, history and rich amounts of delicious food (*carbs) to enjoy. Holiday Extras provides travel insurance policies to countries where FCDO currently advises suitable for unnecessary travel (such as holidays). If you are traveling to a country with an FCO advisory warning, you may need a specialist insurance provider. battleface is a provider of flexible insurance plans for travelers to unique locations, including those under the government's only necessary travel advice. However, during the summer months, the small city can become very busy as more than 50,000 tourists per day. If you're not prepared, it's easy to miss some of the hidden gems this unique place has to offer, such as where to find the best authentic Venetian dishes, how to avoid long queues in Piazza San Marco and where to find all the important free wifi! Fortunately, dear travelers, you are in the best place to know and make the most of what to do in Venice. In our Venice tour guide we will include: So grab a red glass and go with us as we navigate large buildings, old palaces, small streets and of course, gondolas! How to get to Venice Where better to start than at first. Venice is 697 miles from London, where you have stayed at an airport hotel with parking and left your car, with flights that take about 2 hours. Just enough time to practice some Italian keyword phrases. While you're at it, why not book an airport lounge to learn the lingo in luxury. Read our secrets about UK airport lounges to find out how they can help you travel better. Which airports are close to Venice? There are two airports serving Venice. Most flights will be transferred to the larger Marco Polo Airport, just five miles from the city. If you fly with Ryanair from Stansted Airport, East Midlands or Leeds-Bradford, you can reach Treviso Airport, about 25 miles from the city. We definitely recommend flying into Marco Polo Airport if possible, as the city centre is only a short distance away and you get the best views of Venice from above. Read our comprehensive guide to all the best holiday destinations welcoming British families this October. How to get from the airport to Venice Now you have landed in beautiful Italy, what is the best way to get to Venice from Marco Polo Airport? You can choose the bus, taxi or boat to ferry you to your destination. Break these options down so you can make a choice right. The shuttle bus from Marco Polo Airport to Venice Atvo Express Venice costs €15 (£13.30) for round trip tickets The shuttle service takes about 20 minutes. Tickets are available from the public transport booth in the arrival hall, but to travel better as a professional, you can book online and beat the queues! Shuttle taxi from Marco Polo Airport to Venice If speed is the name of the game, then nothing will take you into the city faster than the local taxi. As with all taxis, this is a premium transport method, and as such costs €40 (£35.50), but like buses can be booked online for maximum convenience. Both buses and taxis take you across the bridge from the mainland to Piazzale Roma, where many cars can enter Venice. If you are in the city then you will need to arrange your own way to your hotel so that it is either a walk, a water bus or a private water taxi. Boat transfers from Marco Polo Airport to Venice Of course, the real way to take it is by bus. ATVO service takes 70 minutes to reach Piazzale Roma, costing around €12 (£10.66) for a single and €22 (£19.50) for a return. In addition, the Barzi bus costs the same price and takes about 40 minutes to reach Venice. The downside, however, is that this bus stops at Tronchetto, further a while and a much less convenient check-off location. What are the best ways to travel around Venice? Phew, you're here! Time to start exploring and getting around Venice. You may be wondering about public transport in Venice. Usually this will be where we talk about your options on taxis, buses, subways and so on, but you won't find such talk when it comes to Venice! Since the city is basically standing on the floor, there are no roads, no cars, no buses and certainly no subway (saltwater tends to turn them quite rusty). No, it's best to walk around Venice or by water. Should I walk through Venice? As with all cities, but especially when it comes to Venice, we believe that the best way to explore is on a walk. The city centre is quite compact, with a walk from Piazza San Marco to the Rialto Bridge in just about 10 minutes. That being said, it's still worth packing a comfortable pair of shoes, just in case of flip flops cut it. Moreover, we think walking is the absolute best way to get lost in Venice's myst mysties and side streets and alleys. Trusting us, being lost is the only way to truly explore all the restaurants, bars, shops, workshops and Planning is great, but the best moments are often unscripted! Naturally, we recommend installing Google Maps on your phone to help you find your way again. It pays to book your airport hotel or your lounge as soon as you book your flight. Prices usually rise near the day you fly, so the sooner you tell us your day, the more likely you are to save. Book my airport hotel today Should I travel through Venice by boat? While walking offers the city's most intimate experience, unfortunately most of us don't have time to wander every meandering Venely street. If time is a factor, nothing gets you around the city faster than vaporetto which is the city's water bus. Vaporetto works like a bus in any other city, with many regular routes and stops but there are a few things you should know about water buses before hoping on: Let people get off before boarding. Free App Venice in Time. Confirm your ticket before you board the vaporetto, or you may be fined. Not the dunes. The variety of different tickets available for vaporetto can be a bit da difficult. Fortunately, we discovered that you can skip most of the options as they are designed for locals, leaving you with tickets for tourists. Here are some of the most popular tickets we've seen: The single itinerary is €5 (£4.44) and returns €10 (£8.88). An unlimited number of trips in 75 minutes will cost you €7.50 (£6.66). Unlimited 1, 2, 3 and 7-day travel tickets are also available. If you plan to use vaporetto a lot, then we think picking up one of these is the best value for money. Those between the ages of 6 and 29 can buy a Rolling Venice card for €6 (£5.33). This allows you to have unlimited travel tickets of €72 (£19.50) 72 hours. As mentioned above, you can upgrade your daily card to include airport transfers, which cost €6 (£5.33) for one way and €12 (£10.66) for a return. Tickets are available from machines at vaporetto stops or from ticket offices spread throughout the city. Top 10 tips for your Venice vacation Want to know our top tips to make the most of your Venice vacation? It's no secret that the city is one of the most popular tourist destinations in the world and busy crowds can have a negative impact on your time here. We learned a lot during our stay, so here are our 10 tips to help make your Venice vacation better. 1. Avoid busy times Venice is the busiest during the summer months, when everyone comes to absorb the Mediterranean sun. But we have found the city much more interesting in late spring or early autumn, when the weather is still pleasant and lacking Traffic is pure happiness! 2. Staying in Venice is the best first thing in the morning and in the evening, when the cruise ships do not run and the quietest streets. To avoid missing out on these times (or to save you from waking up at 5am), we think it's best to be in the city itself. Accommodation is available to suit all preferences of a budget, but we recommend Hotel Caprera offers affordable accommodation, with a great location. 3. Gondola is a must Because how can you visit Venice and not gondola? However, knowing how much a gondola trip should cost says easier done. The city of Venice actually set the official rate of gondola rides, which start at around €80 for 30 minutes, with an additional 20 minutes slot costing €40. Expect fares to rise higher after 7 p.m. It's worth knowing that although these prices are set by the city, they are rarely respected. For example, a singing gondolier can cost a premium, so it's worth discussing the cost and length of your trip with the gondolier before you've even stumbled into the boat. You can find gondolas throughout the main tourist attractions, so finding a trip should not be too difficult. Piazzale Roma, the Rialto Bridge Area and the Doge Palace are all top areas to find a gondolier just waiting to get you on board. If you are traveling to Venice as a group, it is also worth remembering that gondolas can sit up to 6 people. 4. Avoid food from the tourist trap A cup of coffee in Piazza San Marco can set you back € 5 (I just heard a sore wail coming from my wallet?). If cash is more important to you than watching, food and drinks are cheaper away from tourist centers. You never know, you might even find an even more authentic brew and a fraction of the cost. 5. You can't bring your bags into the Basilica During the peak summer months, the queue for Venice's main attractions may be incredibly long, but one destination that is absolutely worth waiting in line for is Saint Mark's Basilica in Piazza San Marco. Said to be the most famous cathedral in the city, its stunning elegance is spectacular and is undoubtedly one of the top things to do in Venice. But it's worth remembering that they don't allow any handbags in the building. We saw some unfortunate tourists queuing for half an hour, only to be asked to join another queue to put their bags in the cloak room where they were asked to re-join the BACK of the first queue. A painful rookie error. Learn from these mistakes; Make sure you send your bags in the cloakroom first to avoid queuing twice. There are plenty of experiences in Venice, don't spend all your time in line! 6. To really avoid the queues, book in advance Like Basilica, you can expect long queues throughout the city during busy times. However, the longest queues are usually for the box office, so for better travel, book in advance to ignore these things. Tickets for some of the most popular attractions can be found here. 7. Make the most of the hotel's Wifi wifi during the holiday has become as important as sunscreen and a pair of clothes in backup, so it is useful to know where you can get connect for free. Most hotels and restaurants have free wifi, giving you a great opportunity to upload pictures of your rustic wood-burning area to Instagram (is it lunchtime?). There are WIFI hotspots scattered around the city, but be prepared to pay for We found that 24 hours cost us €5, 72 hours costing €15 and seven-day packages would set us back €20. Naturally, if you're lucky enough to be jetting off to Venice in a week, the second option is by far the best value for money. 8. Make the most of free loots. There are not many public toilets in Venice and sometimes there are queues to compete with the Basilius! Just 'sweet' deal, you have to fork out €1.50 for convenience. If you can, use the free loots found in hotels and restaurants. Paying for wifi and loots making €5 coffee doesn't seem so expensive now! Just remember - signori for men and signore for women. 9. It can flood (and smell) Sadly both to part and parcel with a city in a lagoon. We've noticed the smell in Venice is at its most pungent during the hottest period, so if you need another reason to avoid peak summer months, think of your poor nostrils! Locally known as Acqua Alta, flooding usually occurs at high tide, and can make Venee alleys feel like the streets of Atlantis. Usually occurring during the winter months, flooding is usually quite minor (an odd pudd or overflowing sewer) and will not be more than a nuisance for your Venice vacation. However, if you hear the siren, it means that higher tides than usual are approaching, during which time the city will place wooden walkways over high in the most flood-prone areas. 10. Expect to get lost It may feel like there is no logic to Venice's address system, as all buildings are numbered in sequence, not by street, but across the entire city from 1 to more than 15000. Unless your orientation skills are almost superhuman, you can expect to find yourself walking to a dead end or being cut by a canal. It is important not to panic, but to give yourself time to get around and amble through this enchanting city. After all, being lost is part of the charm! Yes, you don't need to bring all the heavy travel guides and maps that may disappoint you. To enjoy all the things to do in Venice without unnecessary luggage, check out our guide on things you don't need to go on holiday to. These will be places to be cautious if you're looking for quite the price, eat authentic Venice. Pro tip: If you can't understand menus or waiter, use Google Translate to translate languages in real time. We did and it worked a treat. How to make the most of your money in Venice We have set up how to get to Venice, what to do and where to eat during your Italian vacation, but you will not get very far away from doing any of the them if you do not bring your euros! That being said, let's see how to make your money go further on your Venice vacation. 1. How much money should I bring to Venice? Like the rest of Italy, Venice's currency is the Euro, however prices are quite steep the rest of the country due to it being such a popular tourist hotspot. Although you can spread the cost by purchasing tickets to the attractions before your holiday, it is still a good idea to bring in a significant amount of spending. If you are unsure about carrying a lot of money on the busy streets of Venice, we recommend choosing a currency card, such as a FairFX money card before you leave. You can top up your travel card before you hit the road to Venice, which means all your money is accessible wherever you are. Moreover, the exchange rate will be set there and then at the best level for you. Then you can travel with peace of mind, knowing you are protected from currency market volatility. 2. Where can I get the best deals in Venice? As mentioned before, if you are looking for the best deals on food, drinks and so on, then avoid preferable Piazza San Marco. Merchants and restaurants know these are places where tourists also flock, so will raise their prices to reflect demand. Like with almost everything in life, it pays to shop around; if you're looking for an authentic taste of Venice, explore around the less traveled roads. For example, the walk with lovely guide Luisella from seevenice.it gave us a great insight into the secrets of the city that can be easily overlooked, especially when it is particularly busy. It's always nice to find some hidden gems that you didn't expect to find! 3. Tipping is mandatory in Venice? Tipping is often not part of the culture in Italy so does not feel compelly tip at restaurants. In fact, many will include a 12% service fee that goes into administration. Of course, if you already feel the service has been special then a little tip is appreciated, but do not feel it is necessary. 4. Don't forget to have fun in Venice! It is always a good idea to be careful with money on vacation, but do not let it stand in the fun way. Venice is a unique city with things to do that you can't experience anywhere else in the world. Anyway, how many chances do we have to go on a gondola in our lives? Carpe Diem and all that! 5. How much did we spend? Here are some of the costs of our Venice trip: Round trip flights: £64 3-bed flats (two nights): £420 Gondola ride (30 minutes): €80 (£71) St Mark's Basilica: free! Doge's Palace: €20 (£17.80) adults. €13 (£11.50) kids Do I need to be able to speak Italian to enjoy Venice? Whenever traveling to a new country, speaking a foreign language, it is always a worry that your English may not be understood. After all, no one wants to try to order risotto squid squid, only to be greeted by a plate of chicken rice and a scornful look from the waiter! With that said, do you need Have the ability to speak Italian to enjoy your Venice vacation? Good news! English is spoken and understood throughout Venice, especially in tourist destinations. To survive here you do not need to learn Italian, but it will finitely help this effort will be appreciated by the locals. Here are some basic phrases that we find useful, and will allow you to show off your multilingual skills: What phrases should I learn for my Venice vacation? Hello: Ciao (official) or Buongiorno (official) Yes: Sì No: No Please: Every favore Do you speak English?: Parla inglese? Can I have the bill please?: Il conto, per favore? How much is it?: Quante Thank you: Grazie Goodbye: Ciao (official) or Arrivederci (official) That wraps our stop whistle tour through just some of the things Venice has to offer, but the only way to really experience such a great city is to see it with your own eyes.
